

Editor's notes

I hope this issue of Analytic Teaching and Philosophical Praxis finds all of you well. I apologize for the long delay in getting out Volume 29. It turns out that learning all the details of layout design, website maintenance, and everything else that is needed to keep a journal up and running, takes considerable time. Now that I finally know the 'technical side' of running a journal, I can commit myself more diligently to my favorite side of the business, namely, eliciting quality contributions.

The contributions to this volume span a wide variety of concerns, from reconstructing the notion of personhood to reflecting on the fantasy literature of J. R. R. Tolkien. The majority of the contributions come from the NAACI conference held at Viterbo in June of 2008. I am thankful for the patience of those contributors.

I hope you will find the selection of articles thought-provoking and helpful in deepening your appreciation for not only the community of inquiry but also the challenges of teaching in general.

Happy reading,

Jason J. Howard
