Citations for paraphrased material give credit to the author and include the year published (Thompson, 2012). If a direct quote is used, a page number is required. One study concluded that childhood obesity has “more than doubled in the last two decades” (Johnson & Jones, 2012, p. 68). When the author is included in the sentence, only the page number is needed in the parentheses. The study done by Johnson and Jones (2012) concluded that childhood obesity has “more than doubled in the last two decades” (p. 68).
